

September 27, 2007

Dear Valued Customers and Partners,

Important news! Effective October 1, 2007, Wallace-Day, Inc., a leader in providing advanced Building Automation and Energy Management Systems to the Virginia marketplace since 1987, will change its name to AERO Integrated Solutions, Inc.

With advances in web services and interoperability, customers are demanding a single solutions source for not only controlling the building environment and managing energy usage, but also monitoring and managing their buildings' advanced communication capable subsystems. AERO Integrated Solutions will continue to develop and grow the expertise required to service these growing needs of our clients.

Why AERO? AERO means air or weather, which appropriately represents what we control and monitor inside a building. AERO can also represent streamline, which appropriately represents our desire to offer streamlined integrated solutions to our customers.

This is a change in name only and is not a change in the corporate entity or structure. We expect to complete the branding changes, including van labeling, email transition and stationery, by the end of the year.

Please feel free to visit our new website (www.aero-is.com) to learn more about AERO Integrated Solutions or email us at info@aero-is.com should you have any questions.

Sincerely,

Stephen Loving
President/CEO